SOMETHING WONDERFUL!

ONLY $6.00

—FOR A—

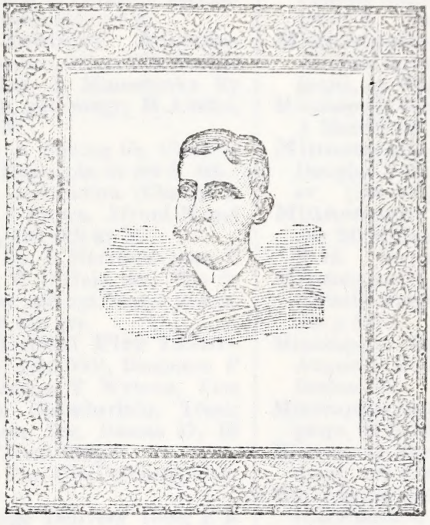

FREE HAND CRAYON PORTRAIT

ELEGANTLY FRAMED.

☞ With Three Months to Pay for it! ☜

A New Method.

By an altogether new device I am enabled to make Free Hand Crayon Portraits (which are known to be absolutely permanent), at a price even lower than portraits (worked-over prints which are known to fade in a few years). Photographs, tintypes, ambrotypes, daguerreotypes, etc., can be enlarged to any size desired. Changes can be made in the drapery, hair, etc., or a single portrait can be taken from a group. Satisfactory pictures always guaranteed.

PORTRAITS BEAUTIFULLY FRAMED.

Knowing that I have the advantage over all competitors, both in quality of work and price, I am confident of doing an immense business and have contracted with a manufacturer for a great number of frames at a price so low that I can furnish an elegant frame with each portrait, which would cost at the stores about one-half the price I ask for portrait and frame.

Price List of Three Sizes of Portraits and Frames, with Terms of Payment:

Size of Frame.	Size of Head.	Price.	Due on Delivery.	Due 1st of Month.	Due 1st of 2d Month.	Due 1st of 3d Month.	Cash Price.
14x17	5 in.	$6 00	$1 50	$1 50	$1 50	$1 50	$5 40
18x22	7 in.	12 00	3 00	3 00	3 00	3 00	10 80
22x27 (Life Size.)	9½ in.	20 00	5 00	5 00	5 00	5 00	18 00

The prices above are on gilt frames. The same style in bronze are $1 more on 14x17; $1.50 on 18x22; $2 on 22x27.

☞ Ten per cent discount allowed for cash on delivery. Orders received from other cities by mail, and sent C. O. D. on inspection.

Artistic Productions.

Having located in Minneapolis about five years ago, I feel that I have gained a reputation in Crayon work second to none in the Northwest, judging from the amount of business I have done. My price heretofore has always been the highest ($50 for 22x27, unframed), but by my new method I can do five times the amount of work, and can afford to make artistic portraits cheaper than the trash agents have been afflicting the public with, which are only enlarged photographs, with a little crayon rubbed on, and that not in good taste. Besides, they fade, and a Free Hand Portrait will not.

Samples can be seen and orders given at my Office and Salesroom,

OPENING OF CLASSES.—For Ladies and Children, September 1, 1888, at 4 P. M. For Ladies and Gentlemen, same date, 8 P. M.

Open the year round for private instruction. Ladies and gentlemen wishing to rapidly become proficient in Fine Waltzing and the latest Dances, in a limited time, should avoid large classes and take PRIVATE INSTRUCTION. Pupils will be received at all times during the season. It is eminently advisable, however, for intending pupils to join at first lesson, especially beginners, to enable them to thoroughly acquire the rudiments. Private lessons at any time by appointment. I make a specialty of teaching all those who have failed to learn by going to alleged teachers who have neither method nor practical experience. I aim to teach dancing as it should be, not as it sometimes is.

Classes are at all times under my personal supervision. Special attention given to private classes at seminaries and residences.

For further particulars see H. M. JENKINS. Office at Academy, 9 A. M. to 11 P. M., days of school.

THE BLACK AUTOCOPYIST.

50,000 Autocopyists are now in use by Merchants, Agents, Bankers, Manufacturers, Architects, Engineers, etc.

The Autocopyist produces up to several hundred SUPERIOR BLACK COPIES in Lithographer's ink of anything written or drawn with any ordinary pen, on ordinary glazed paper, using the Special Ink, which is as fluid as the usual writing ink, and quite adapted for the use of Etching, Ruling and Music Pens (for ruling the five lines at a time). By sprinkling "Transfer Powder" over any of the copies, they act as fresh originals even after months, thus an unlimited number of copies can be obtained from one writing or drawing. Tracing Paper or Tracing Cloth can be used with very good results.

OWATONNA. The judicial seat of Steele county, is advantageously located, on Strait river, at the intersection of the C. & N. W. and the C., M. & St. P. Rys., 70 miles south of Minneapolis. It is surrounded by one of the richest agricultural districts in the state, is well built, has many fine business blocks and handsome residences, is noted as a live business point, and is destined to become one of the chief manufacturing points of the West, from its natural advantages of good water power and exceptional railroad facilities for distributing in all directions. Among the manufacturing and business interests are 2 flouring mills, 2 large grain elevators and several smaller ones, 2 foundries and machine shops, a large pork packing establishment, a creamery turning out about 800 pounds of butter a day, good hotels, 2 banks, 2 live weekly newspapers, the Journal and Herald and the People's Press, and a full representation of all the various professions and trades. Twelve churches, representing various denominations, 5 public schools having a force of 14 teachers, a public library, an opera house, and an efficient and well equipped fire department are sustained. In addition to its public school system Owatonna has a college and seminary, one under the auspices of the Baptist society, the other conducted by the Sisters of St. Francis. Both are well known institutions and add greatly to the educational advantages of the city, which is becoming notably prominent for the liberal and careful manner in which such matters are supported and maintained. Owatonna is beautifully laid out and presents an attractive appearance, and its public square, natural park and mineral springs are much admired by visitors. The assessed value of real and personal property is $1,636,135, while the bonded indebtedness is only $25,000. The shipments, which are large, comprise wheat, flour, live stock and farm produce. The inducements to investing capital are of the most generous nature, and rarely indeed can be recorded the possession by a city of the religious, educational and social advantages, healthful location, cheap motive power for manufacturing and unrivaled transportation facilities, which present a most inviting field to the manufacturer, capitalist, mechanic or home seeker. Semi-weekly stage to Geneva. Tel., W. U. Exp., Am. and U. S. Population, 5,000. Mail, daily. L. L. Wheelock, postmaster.

ROCHESTER. The judicial seat of Olmsted county, is located on the Zumbro river, which supplies fine water power, and on the C. & N. W. Ry., 70 miles from St. Paul and 80 from Minneapolis. It was first settled in 1855, incorporated in 1858, and is now the most important city in the southwestern part of the State. It is governed by a mayor and board of aldermen—Andrew Nelson, mayor; E B Becton, recorder; E. H. Walden, treas. Among the manufacturing and business interests of the place may be mentioned 3 flour mills, a carriage factory, 2 foundries, 4 elevators, 2 opera houses, 2 public halls, 2 libraries, 3 national banks, 4 newspapers — the Rochester Herald (German), the Record and Union, Olmsted County Democrat and the Rochester Post—and several first-class hotels. The educational and religious facilities of the city are ample and consist of 11 churches, representing the Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Universalist, Catholic, Disciples, Evangelical, Ger. Methodist and Lutheran denominations. The graded schools employ 21 teachers, and have an enrollment of 977 scholars. A normal school and business college has been erected at a cost of $12,000. The city is also the location of the second Minnesota State Hospital for the Insane and the Academy of Notre Dame de Lourdes. A fine city hall has been erected at a cost of $20,000; a county jail, cost, $20,000. Assessed valuation of real and personal property, $1,881,045, and a bonded debt of $20,000. The soil in the vicinity is a rich loam, eminently adapted for agricultural purposes. Adjacent improved land can be purchased at an average price of $30 per acre. The shipments comprise flour, wheat, cheese, butter, live stock and pork. A fire department, consisting of a steamer, 4 hose carriages and 2 hook and ladder companies, and a fine system of water works, the cost of construction and maintenance of which has already exceeded $100,000, render the city safe from any serious conflagration. Stage to Spring Valley and High Forest tri-weekly. Exp., Am. Tel., W. U. Population, 6,000. Mail, daily. Samuel De Wolf, postmaster.

ST. PAUL. Admirably situated on the bluffs overlooking the Mississippi river, St. Paul occupies a splendid commercial position at the head of navigation, further progress on the river being stopped by the Falls of St. Anthony, a few miles higher up. It is in the southern part of Ramsey county, 11 miles southeast of Minneapolis, 155 from Duluth, 325 from Milwaukee, 410 from Chicago, and 791 by river from St. Louis. Fifty years ago the site of this now flourishing city was an uninhabited waste, over which no foot save that of the red man ever passed. Although originally included in the military reservation of Fort Snelling, which was established in 1819, it was not until 1837, after a treaty had been made with the Dakota Indians, that the lands on the east side of the river came into the possession of the government and the settlement of the place commenced.

HISTORY.

Pierre Parrant and Wm. Beaunette were the first settlers, and the following year (1841) Rev Father Gaultier arrived here from Dubuque and established a Roman Catholic chapel, which he dedicated to St. Paul, and in a short time this name was permanently adopted by the settlement.

In the spring of 1846 a postoffice and school were established, and the following year the town site was surveyed and the plat recorded. The first hotel was also built this year. During 1848 several meetings were held to take steps for securing a territorial organization, and at a general convention for that purpose, held at Stillwater, it was decided that St. Paul should be the capital of the new territory, when organized. The passage in March, 1849, of the act which fixed the seat of government here, was an event of very great importance to St. Paul, and since that time she has grown very rapidly. The same year her incorporation as a town took place, and she was made the judicial seat of Ramsey county, which was organized at this time. In 1851 this town was permanently fixed as the State capital, and the State House was built on grounds donated by Charles Bazille, one of the early settlers. The town improved rapidly, immigration poured in, and in 1854, when the population was about 5,000, St. Paul was incorporated as a city. In 1856 speculation in real estate became rife and the city continued to grow, doubling its population in a few months; new hotels were opened, fine stores and handsome residences built, a City Hall erected, a police force established, and the first bridge commenced. In 1857 an unsuccessful attempt was made to remove the capital to St. Peter, and a similar attempt in 1869 was vetoed by Governor Marshall. The financial crash of 1857 wrought fearful havoc in St. Paul, reducing the reputedly rich to penury, putting a period to building and business operations, paralyzing trade and considerably reducing the population. For a short time the abomination of desolation seemed to brood over St. Paul, but the outbreak of the war turned the tide and the city soon began to renew her promises of future greatness, and the position she now holds is sufficient proof of the manner in which these promises have been fulfilled. This change in the commercial prosperity of the city led to the adoption of several important measures, among others the organization of the board of public works, to regulate and inspect public improvements, and the city has continued that

REMARKABLE RATE OF GROWTH,

and is now regarded as one of the marvels of this nineteenth century. To those who know nothing of the immense extent of the Northwest and the rapidity with which it has been and continues to be filled with the most vigorous and enterprising from among the inhabitants of the older divisions of this continent and from the countries of Europe, the accounts of its growth must sound like the boldest Munchausenisms. How can they credit them? Is it possible that a city has sprung up, in a region so recently almost wholly unpeopled, that in all respects, with St. Louis and Chicago? Can it be true that it has about quadrupled its population in less than eight years, and now contains nearly 200,000 inhabitants? Verily the story is gross enough to tax the credulity of even credulous people, not acquainted with all the circumstances. But when it is known that this city is the emporium for the commerce of an empire nearly 900,000 square miles in extent, and immensely rich in agricultural, pastoral, mining and manufacturing resources, and that each successive stage of its development, so far, has only revealed a greater variety and extent of wealth than was previously supposed to exist, the wonder ceases. We then realize that the city's progress is but the natural result of a far more astonishing cause, and are willing to accept for truth what erst seemed preposterous exaggeration.

COMPARES FAVORABLY,

ST. PAUL AS A SUMMER RESORT.

Besides being noted as a thriving and busy commercial centre, St. Paul has, from its excellent location, always been popular as a summer resort. Thousands of visitors come here every year from places further south, and the excellent hotel accommodations provided in and around the city hold them, until, becoming accustomed to the life and bustle of the new Northwest, they change what was first merely a pleasure trip into a business one, and end frequently by locating here permanently.

The city is divided into 7 wards, represented by 15 aldermen, has a board of health, a board of public works, and a municipal court, which has exclusive criminal jurisdiction within the city. There is also one of the most efficient fire departments in the country, and a police force not excelled anywhere.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

Let us, as briefly as is practicable, take note of what has been done in St. Paul during the year 1887. In this brief interval alone there were 13 miles of sewers built, 66½ miles of streets graded, and 11½ miles paved with either granite, cedar blocks, or asphalt; 45 miles of new sidewalks of oak plank were also laid, besides a considerable distance of wooden sidewalks being replaced by those of natural or artificial stone. Five and three-fourths miles in length were added to the street railway systems, and a cable line about three miles long constructed. The number of buildings erected within the city limits was 3,953, and their cost of construction was $9,018,214. Besides these, some 400 or more others have been built in the outlying suburbs at a further cost of $2,261,650, making the total expended in building $11,279,864. Among the new buildings erected, 60 are factories and shops, 13 churches, 10 city public schools, 2 district schools, 2 college additions, several hotels, and 3 or 4 suburban railway stations. The building expenditures exceeded those for 1886 by $1,526,418, and more largely still those of every other previous year, except 1883 when part of the cost of the new State capitol and that of several other large buildings, added heavy amounts to the aggregate.

The total of

was 14,095 transfers, and of the considerations $54,283,481. This was an increase of 2,652 in the number of transfers, and of $26,456,848 in the total of considerations, over the figures of 1886. There was a very marked advance in the values of some classes of real property over those of 1886. For instance, $800 per front foot had, previously to 1887, been regarded as the extreme for property in the business districts. Higher figures had been asked by those not desirous of selling but no transfers are known to have taken place above $780 per front foot. During the past year, however, sales have been made of several pieces at much higher figures—in one deal $1,125 being paid, and for several lots $1,200 was offered and refused. It may be safely assumed that eligible business property has advanced fully 50 per cent. during the year. Residence property is as much affected by location as sites for business houses, and, in the most desirable neighborhoods, the rise in price has equaled an average advance of 50 per cent., at least; while in less attractive localities the average will not, perhaps, exceed 20 per cent. Yet it may still be truthfully claimed that prices of real estate in St. Paul are lower than in most other cities of equal size, and even in many of those having 50,000 inhabitants or less. In this connection, we may properly remark that 1888 bids fair to be even a busier year with builders than 1887, for more structures are now proposed for the coming season than were projected at this time last year, and a fair proportion of them are to be large and expensive.

THE MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES

of St. Paul have also been very considerably increased during the year, in the number of establishments and operatives employed, and in the values of the outputs. The figures given are as follows: Manufactories, 1,081; operatives, 23,846; value of products, $39,032,600. A large proportion of the old establishments have added more or less to their facilities, and all seem to be prosperous.

In the

of industry a more than corresponding prosperity seems to have been enjoyed. Forty additional wholesale establishments were added during the year, making the present number 508. Their number of employes is 7,813, and the aggregate amount of sales foots up about $100,000,000—the most conservative statement being $96,126,000, an increase of nearly $13,000,000 over the total for 1886. This increase is not owing, either, to any advance in prices, but entirely to the enlarged demands made upon our city merchants for supplies, and may, therefore, justly be claimed as a normal and healthy extension of her trade. Meanwhile, the retail traffic has shown a corresponding growth and condition of prosperity.

GALENIC

Medical Institute,

67 EAST THIRD STREET,

(Nearly Opposite Pioneer Press Building.)

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA.

ESTABLISHED in 1861 for the cure of PRIVATE, NERVOUS and CHRONIC DISEASES, including Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Nervous Debility, Impotency, Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Diseases of Women, etc.

The physicians of this old and reliable Institute especially treat all the above diseases—are regular graduates—and guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, and may be consulted personally or by letter.

Young and middle-aged men who may be suffering from Nervous Debility, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, or any of the above Private, Nervous and Chronic Diseases, would do well to remember that we are the only old and well regulated Institute, established here in St. Paul ever since 1861, and during that time have restored thousands of cases, and most of them recommend us again to other ones similarly afflicted.

Sufferers from any of these ailments, before consulting others, should understand their diseases and the latest improved treatment adopted at our Institute, by reading our books.

THE SECRET MONITOR and Guide to Health, a private Medical Treatise on the above diseases, with the Anatomy and Physiology of the Sexual System, in Health and Disease, containing nearly three hundred pages and numerous illustrations, sent to any address on receipt of reduced price, only thirty cents, or value in one or two cent stamps. Pamphlets and chart of questions for stating case sent free.

All business strictly confidential. Office hours from 8 A. M. to 6:30 P. M., Sundays excepted.

In corresponding with us, address letters thus:

STILLWATER. Situated at the head of Lake St. Croix, in Washington county, of which it is the judicial seat, 18 miles northeast of St. Paul and 30 northeast of Minneapolis. It is the business and manufacturing centre of the entire St. Croix lumber district, extending northward and spreading over a large section of Minnesota and Wisconsin. Settled in 1843, when Minnesota was a part of the territory of Wisconsin, Stillwater has steadily progressed, and now ranks as the fifth city of the State in size and importance. It was platted as a village in 1848, and incorporated as a city in 1854. Transportation facilities are afforded by the St. Paul & D. R. R., the Stillwater br. of the H. & D. div. of the C., M. & St. P. Ry., and the Stillwater br. of the C., St. P., M. & O. Ry. Originally settled for lumbering purposes, this business has, thus far, been the leading interest in the history of the place, but other industries are now beginning to assume immense proportions, and will shortly push the lumber trade very hard for first place. The city contains several large lumber and flouring mills, feed mills, an agricultural implement factory, large grain elevators, freight car works, carriage and wagon factories, foundries and machine shops, a boat factory, and many more too numerous to mention. The city has a fine opera house, 4 banks—the Lumbermen's National and the First National, St. Croix Savings Bank and the Stillwater Savings Bank. It has excellent water works, owned by private citizens and erected at a cost of $200,000. These, with a thoroughly efficient fire brigade, render the city safe from any serious conflagration. A daily and 4 weekly newspapers are published, and keep the citizens informed of all current topics of interest. Religion is represented by the following churches: Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, German Methodist, German Lutheran, Swedish Lutheran, Congregational, Universalist and 2 Catholic. Stillwater has a good city hall, a public library and excellent graded schools—1 parochial and 1 German Lutheran; in fact, all the attributes of a first-class city. Tel., W. U. Exp., Am. and U. S. Population, 18,000. Mail daily. John McCarthy, postmaster.

WINONA. Fourth city in population and importance in the state, is situated on the west bank of the Mississippi river, 100 miles below the head of navigation and 700 above its junction with the Missouri, in Winona county, of which it is the judicial seat. The population is about 25,000. The city governed by a council of nine aldermen. The mayor is the executive officer and has a veto power upon the acts of the council. The present city officers are John A. Mathews, mayor; O. H. Clarke, recorder; W. A. Allen, municipal judge; L. K. Eastey, chief of police; E. S. Mead, city treasurer; H. L. Buck, city attorney; John B. Fellows, city engineer; Winona Herald, official city newspaper. Winona is 103 miles south of St. Paul and 114 from Minneapolis. Winona is division headquarters of the Winona & St. Peter and Chicago & Northwestern railroads. It is the terminus of the Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul, and is on the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the Chicago, Burlington & Northern. The city in July voted $100,000 bonus for a railroad southwest, to be built before January 1, '89, and the road is now rapidly building to Omaha, about 300 miles. A road via Faribault to meet the Manitoba at Willmar is also projected, as well as a through line to the Sault Ste. Marie. These lines connect Winona with the great lakes and with the whole of the eastern system to the seaboard, and the Mississippi is also of great importance among the transportational advantages. Numerous lines of steamers connect this city daily with all river points, and the improvements projected and in course of construction under the auspices of the U. S. government give increased consequence to the river navigation, as the only means of competition whereby reasonable rates can be secured. Winona is the most important river point in the southern part of the state, and has long been known as the gate city of southern Minnesota. It is located on the eastern margin of that remarkable wheat belt which extends through Minnesota and Dakota, and whose surpassing richness and capacity for producing the great cereals are now attracting the attention and exciting the wonder of the civilized world. In this department of agriculture, in stock raising, and in all the leading industries, this city is unsurpassed. Hundreds of prosperous towns have recently sprung up along the adjacent railway lines, and their merchants and business men are looking to Winona as their base of supplies for the vast stretch of territory covered by their rapidly increasing trade. Three large steam flouring mills are now in successful operation within the city limits, and have a capacity of 3,800 barrels per day. The flour manufactured here is of the finest quality, and commands a high price in all markets. The C. C. Porter Mill has just been refitted throughout with all the new improvements in flouring machinery, and is conceded to be the best equipped flouring mill in the United States. Lumbering is the most important industry. The four large saw mills located here have a combined capacity of 150,000,000 feet per annum. Among the special advantages offered by this city may be mentioned its beautiful location and surroundings, its healthfulness, an effective system of water works with the second highest stand pipe in the U. S., gas works, electric light, street cars, efficient police and fire departments, first class public schools employing 60 teachers and having 2,463 scholars, affording the best advantages for education; churches of every denomination, and an intelligent and hospitable people, offering social advantages unsurpassed by those of any other city in the Northwest. It contains 2 breweries, machine shops, the C. & N. W. R. R. shops, plow works, planing mills, harvester works, wagon and carriage factories, 3 large and 25 small hotels, a free public library of 3,000 volumes, 4 halls, and a very thorough representation of the various professions, trades and branches of commerce. Winona is also the location of the first of the three State Normal schools. It occupies a magnificent structure, erected at a cost of $150,900, and enjoys a wide fame as an institution imparting a thorough training to teachers for every grade of school work. It has one of the most complete libraries in the State, an elegant reading room, a large general museum, a complete chemical laboratory, an art gallery, a large collection of physical apparatus, besides many other advantages. Tuition is free to both sexes, and expenses of students are very low. The St. Mary's Academy for young ladies occupies a new $50,000 building, and is conducted by the Sisters of St. Francis. A savings, 2 national and 2 private banks, with an aggregate capital of $625,000, transact business here. An appropriation of $100,000 has just been obtained for a new postoffice. The city has one daily newspaper, the Republican, one weekly, the Herald, which is the official paper of the city and county and conceded to be one of the leading weeklies in the Northwest, one German semi-weekly, the Westlicher Herold, one German weekly, the Adler, and one Polish weekly, the Wiarus. These papers have an average circulation of over 2,000 copies each. The assessed valuation of the city is $6,158,099, and the bonded indebtedness is $181,500. The chief, though by no means the only shipments of the place, are flour, grain, lumber, wagons, carriages and agricultural implements. Stage communication with Rushford, Houston and Fountain City tri-weekly. Exp., Am. Tel., W. U. Mail, daily. W. J. Whipple, postmaster.

WINONA, MINN.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF ST. FRANCIS.

THIS institution for young ladies and little girls is delightfully situated in one of the most healthy and picturesque cities of the Mississippi Valley. The building, recently erected, is provided with all modern improvements. Over ten acres of play grounds invite to active exercise in the open air. Every advantage is offered for acquiring a thorough Christian education, including both the useful and ornamental. As, in the opinion of the Sisters, the acquisition of such an education should not be connected with extravagant expense, the following terms will no doubt be found very reasonable:

Board and Tuition, including Washing, Bed and Bedding, per session of five months, $70, payable in advance.

German, Drawing, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, free.

Music, Painting, etc., form extra charges.

The religious principles of any denomination are not interfered with, but all the pupils are required to conform to the regulations of the Institution.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

There is no division of the United States possessing greater interest to intelligent people at this time than that included within the limits of the present Territory of Dakota, for the reason that it is probably the most extensive food-producing district in the world. With but little exception, its entire area is cultivable, and nearly all of it has a remarkably rich, deep and productive soil. It is not, however, as has sometimes been supposed, a vast, level, treeless plain. On the contrary, its surface is widely diversified; so much so that the term "undulating prairies" does not convey to the mind a correct impression of its conformation. Were a bird's-eye view possible, the observer of that part lying east of the Missouri river would behold an immense stretch of country, highest at its northern end, traversed from northwest to southeast by two high ranges of hills, respectively known as the Coteaux des Prairie and Coteaux du Missouri. These, however, are not uniform in height, nor always regular in their formation. They may best be described as high plateaus, the summits of which are crowned with immense dunes of drift, some of which approach a conical shape, while others have more the appearance of what are known as moraines or "hogbacks," and still others are irregular in shape. In places, these follow each other in immediate succession, having a width of but two or three miles at their base. In others they are separated into two or more ridges, with occasional extensive valleys between them. In the latter instance it is not uncommon to find lakes, or chain of lakes, with from a few acres to several square miles of surface, and in the lower valleys and gulches or coulees, worn in the slopes of the table lands, apparently, by the washings of streams or rains. Clumps or patches of forest were usually found, prior to the settlement of the country.

A few miles south of the northern boundary, there is between these two ranges a high divide, separating the north from the south-flowing waters, which is but a portion of an elevation that crosses the entire continent. It is here called the Sand Hills, from the fact that a considerable portion of its summit is surmounted by low dunes of light sandy drift. On the east side of the eastern coteaux the tableland declines northeastwardly quite gradually, until it reaches what are called the Pembina mountains, but are really the shores of an ancient lake that once filled the present valley of Red River of the North. The decline thence is much more sudden than that from the base of the coteaux to their brow, and from the constant washings of water, they present, when viewed from the east side, the appearance of a range of well-rounded mounds. From the foot of this formation, the valley extends, on an apparently dead level, to the present banks of Red river, with a width at its northern extremity of, perhaps, forty miles, and narrowing to some ten miles or less at its southern end. The southern part of this valley is between two and three hundred feet higher than its level at the international boundary.

Between these two ridges of coteaux, the land slopes gradually to the middle, through which flows the James or Dakota river, from a short distance below the foot of the Sand Hills, and emptying into the Missouri near the northeast corner of the Territory. This trough-like valley is crossed on both sides by a number of small tributaries of the James, and is a succession of undulations of irregular width. This valley is perhaps the most fertile part of the Territory, except that of Red river, already described, and it embraces nearly two-thirds of that part of the Territory east of the Missouri. In several places along its route, the James river widens into beautiful lakelets, the largest of which is several miles long, with an extreme width of about two miles. One of these is, by courtesy, called a lake, but there are really no lakes in the Territory elsewhere than on the plateaus. Although a very long river, and draining an extensive area of land, except in wet seasons, the James is a small stream, and none of its tributaries are of considerable size. Yet the valley is well watered throughout its entire length. On the western slope of the west range of coteaux, the descent to the Missouri river is steeper than that toward the interior valley, and between its foot and the river there is a wide tract of excellent farming country.

Like the eastern elevation, the sides of this western are cut by numerous small streams. In the northern part of the Territory, north of the Sand Hills, the Souris or Mouse river, which has its source in the Canadian dominions, crosses the line and forms a large loop, passing through the northern boundary again, some forty miles east of its point of entrance. A few miles east of its course, and on the international boundary, which divides them nearly in half, is a formation known as Turtle Mountains, which is the northern extremity of the eastern coteaux. These are irregular in shape, with an area of between 1,200 and 1,600 square miles, and are covered with a fairly dense growth of deciduous forest. Southeastwardly from these hills are a group of lakes, the largest being that known as Minnewaukon, or Devil's Lake. A few miles south of this, the Sheyenne river, which also has its source in the Sand Hills, flows eastwardly through a depression in the coteaux, thence southerly, and finally northeasterly into Red river. Between its head waters and those of the James river, and of tributaries of the Souris, the distances are very short, frequently less than five miles intervening. Beside the Sheyenne river, Red river valley is crossed by Wild Rice, Maple, Goose, Turtle, Big Salt, Park, and Pembina rivers and several smaller streams. Part of this northern region, in the vicinity of the Sand Hills, is considerably broken and better adapted to pastoral than to agricultural pursuits. Southeastern Dakota has a considerable stream, the Big Sioux, also flowing from north to south and forming the southeastern boundary between it and Iowa. Vermilion river, in the southeastern corner, is a considerable stream, draining the district between the Sioux and James rivers.

WESTERN DAKOTA.

That part of Dakota west of the Missouri has numerous streams, among which the Little Missouri, Cannon Ball, Grand, Moreau, Cheyenne, Bad, and White are quite lengthy and have numerous confluents. There is a great deal of excellent agricultural country in this section also, notwithstanding that it is the locality of the "Bad Lands" and of the Black Hills. The former are situated principally along the Cheyenne, Grand and Little Missouri rivers, and are from two or three to twenty-five miles in width. It is supposed that at some time in the world's history, a vast amount of drift was suddenly deposited upon this country, burying its forests and vegetation two or three hundred feet deep; that, in time, this buried wood became coal, the veins being in some instances twenty odd feet in depth. Fires were started in these veins, and they gradually burned out, restoring in part the old water courses by means of the overflow from the accumulation of water in newly-formed basins. Any one can realize how quickly the gullies thus formed would be widened so as to embrace the vast tract now covered by the "Bad Lands." Looking upon them, here you see patches of slag, there great boulders, showing unmistakable evidences of heat, and on every hand, scoria, or burned clay. Where the fires were checked by the caving earth, and the coal did not burn, mounds two or three hundred feet in height stand. Some of these contain several acres of level prairie on their top, and have the same grasses and vegetation, and are the same height as the tablelands on either side of the "Bad Lands." At other points are simply huge piles of clay, and at others great bars of gravel, scoria or sand. In places the subterranean fires are yet burning and the process of formation going forward. Besides the buttes thus formed, there are frequent instances of isolated hills, composed wholly of drift, while others are volcanic formations. Much of the "Bad Lands," however, is tillable, and nearly all affords splendid grazing.

The Black Hills, of which some of the highest peaks are nearly 7,000 feet above sea level, are intersected with numerous valleys, abundantly watered, and, together with the surrounding country at their base, exceedingly fertile. The hill region is heavily wooded, but its mines of gold, tin and other metals are its most valuable products. An excellent variety of cherry-colored marble is found in this vicinity. Beside, upon these hills and Turtle Mountains, there are considerable areas of forest growth in the valleys of the Keya-Paha, Missouri, Sioux, Red and Mouse rivers, and some lighter fringes are still left around some other of the interior rivers and about the lakes. Meanwhile, in the western part of the Territory, very considerable deposits of lignite coal are found, furnishing an excellent quality of fuel, and all over the country it is an easy matter to grow forest trees.

THE SOIL OF DAKOTA

Is wholly a drift formation, except the Black Hills region, and the Coteaux themselves are but successive dunes of friable material, easily dug into and constantly washing to the lower levels by the storms. Like the soil of Minnesota, this contains all the elements of fertility, and its depth renders it practically inexhaustible. It is richest, of course, in the river valleys, where its surface is being continually renewed, and where a greater proportion of its heavier and most productive elements find a permanent lodgment, but well merits to be called fertile even on the most elevated and pointed heights, which are covered with excellent growths of the wild grasses. The contour of the surface is so universally undulating that only small sloughs occur anywhere, and these are seldom deep enough to offer any impediment to travel, or interfere with cultivation. It is generally understood that the word drift, used in describing soils, means the detritis of rocks, disintegrated by attrition and by the chemical action of air and water and their own influence on each other. Where the drift is similar, and has all been subjected to like influences, its elements are the same, but it nearly always occurs that deposits made at different times vary more or less in quantity in different localities. Then, again, they are affected by subsequent washings of water and the action of storms. Hence it must not be supposed that they are exactly alike in all parts of the Territory, or even in any one county. They may be said, in a general way, to comprise silica, alumina, lime, potash, soda and magnesia, and to have had imparted to them by the decay of organic matter, phosphorus, amonia and other elements. While samples taken from different parts of the Territory show different proportions of all these constituents, there are very few localities, and they of insignificant extent, that have not enough of each to give them a high degree of fertility.

CLIMATE OF DAKOTA.

There is nothing about which public opinion is more at fault concerning the entire northwestern region, than its climate. It seems impossible for a man, whose life has been spent in the Ohio valley, or on the Atlantic slope, to believe that the intense degrees of cold frequently noted as being experienced in Dakota are endurable without great suffering, or even permanent injury to the system. Such would no doubt be the case were the atmosphere of this region saturated with moisture like that to which they are accustomed. In that case, the heat of the body would necessarily be quickly absorbed, and it would hardly be possible for the animal functions to generate a sufficient supply. But it must be remembered that the air here is very much dryer, and with such ordinary clothing as insures comfort on a cold day in Columbus or Philadelphia, a person may experience no greater inconvenience here, with the thermometer marking from twenty to twenty-five degrees lower. Hence, it is safe to say that a temperature of zero in Dakota is no harder to withstand than one from twenty to twenty-five above in the localities mentioned. With this truth impressed upon the mind, it will be seen that the extremes of —35° or —40° here mean just about what —10° or —15° would mean there. The most disagreeable climatic feature is the high winds, which sometimes occur in winter, and when accompanied with falls or drifts of snow, have become known as "blizzards." These are not only disagreeable, but positively dangerous, especially to strangers, ignorant of the best course to pursue under the circumstances. But they have prevailed in all northern prairie countries, and are sometimes nearly, if not quite so dangerous in Kansas, and even in Texas, as in northern Dakota. In the no very distant past, northern and central Illinois and eastern Iowa were subject to similar storms; and there, as well as here, they were occasionally attended with loss of life. Exemption there has followed from the cultivation of groves, and such will no doubt be the result here at no very distant day.

PRECIPITATION OF MOISTURE.

After what has been said about the dryness of the atmosphere, it may be doubted whether the moisture is sufficient to support vegetation. This, however, is so palpably disproven by facts that it seems hardly worth while to present arguments to maintain the opposite theory. Yet there are good reasons why this should be the truth; for instance, whenever southerly or warm winds prevail, the moisture they bring hither is speedily set free and deposited as rain or dew. So, too, the dry air during the day causes rapid evaporation from the local and adjacent bodies of water, which is again deposited by the cooling of the air at night, thus keeping up a constant, though not very generous supply. The precipitation, moreover, from these causes, is heaviest at the season when vegetation most needs it; and it is doubtful whether drouths here are ever so severe on growing plants as in what are generally supposed to be more favored regions. Usually the moisture deposits by rain or snow is heaviest in the early summer and spring months, and lightest in winter and autumn. The annual average ranges from 11.4 inches in the western to 24.2 in the Red River valley. For the whole Territory the annual mean is 15.8 inches, of which 4.8 falls in spring, 7.1 in summer, 2.6 in autumn, and 1.3 in winter. The rainfall in the eastern portion is certainly ample for agricultural purposes. West of the Missouri coteaux, the precipitation is lighter, but no difficulty in growing crops seems to have been encountered so far. The soil being loose drift, seldom bakes or crusts, no matter how dry it may become, and the superior strata absorbs moisture enough to support vegetation from those upon which they rest. What has been written about the "aridity" and "frigidity" of this region is disproved by experience.

SALUBRITY OF CLIMATE.

The healthfulness of Dakota might not be disputed by any one who reads the current news of the day, for the contrary is so constantly shown by the facts that are occurring, that it seems hardly possible for intelligent persons to doubt it. True, the country has not long been inhabited by white people, but from its earliest settlement the universal testimony of those who have had experience, is that it is not only healthful, but eminently so, and, except the drawback of the blizzards, pleasant withal. Some few among the many thousands who have resided here have been unfavorably affected, owing to the electrical qualities of the atmosphere, and until they became accustomed to it, quite a good many have suffered more or less inconvenience. But after these earlier effects have passed away, the general influence upon the system is found to be beneficial. The records, however, furnish proofs that cannot be gainsayed, as they are the notations of official reports, carefully collected and published for the purpose of conveying correct information. The official census and mortality reports for 1885, for instance, show the number of deaths in the Territory to have been six for every one thousand inhabitants, or one in every one hundred and sixty-six. True, the comparison of this rate with the older States does injustice to the latter, inasmuch as the population of the Territory embraces a larger proportion of persons in the prime of life, and as there is less crowding, they are freer from that class of diseases resulting from density of population. Against this, however, it may be claimed that very many of those who have made their homes in Dakota were induced to come hither by the hope of regaining their health, already impaired to a degree that rendered them anxious. The average death rate in the United States is about one in every seventy-eight, and in the newer Northwestern States it runs from one in ninety-two to one in one hundred and twenty-five. Hence it will be seen that Dakota's showing indicates a much greater degree of exemption from mortality, even under the condition of equal density of population.

LOCATION AND AREA.

It is customary to locate a country before proceeding to describe it, but it is hoped the reader will pardon the departure from that rule on this occasion. The truth of the matter is, the writer has been so long familiar with this and the other divisions of the Northwest, that he can hardly realize that there are intelligent people who know but little about them. Then, again, they are the subjects of articles in all the popular encyclopedias, and in thousands of copies of immigration pamphlets, published by railroad and other parties interested in the early settlement of this section of the earth. However, as this is a gazetteer article, it is highly proper, if not absolutely necessary, that it shall inform the reader where this Territory is. It joins Minnesota on the west, extending about seventy miles further south on its east boundary and half a degree further where its south boundary leaves the Keya-Paha river. Its northern limit is the 49th parallel, and its western the 104th meridian west of Greenwich. Its length on the east side is about 465 miles and 435 on the west, and its mean width 355 miles. Its area is computed at 149,100 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest territory, on the east by Minnesota and Iowa, on the south by Nebraska and on the west by Wyoming and Montana. It is the third largest political division in the United States, being exceeded only by Texas and California. Except that part lying north of the great bend of the Missouri river, its western boundary is near the terminus of the great western plain, nearly all the country beyond it in that direction being more or less mountainous.

HISTORICAL.

Like the country in this section generally, this Territory was included in the Louisiana purchase, and, nothwithstanding what had been left on record by the early French explorers and traders, and what was said in the journal of their travels by Lewis and Clarke, for nearly half a century it was supposed to be a part of the great American desert, and hardly inhabitable by civilized people, by reason of its interminable drouths and consequent barrenness. It was only as late as 1856 that white settlers penetrated hither with a view to founding homes. During that and the succeeding year, settlements were made at Sioux City and Yankton, on the Missouri river; at Vermillion, at the mouth of a stream of that name, which flows into the Missouri; at Medary, Flandreau and Sioux Falls, on the Big Sioux river, and at Emineza, on the James river, near its mouth. These were all in the southeastern corner, and were somewhat premature attempts to take possession, as the treaty with the Indians for its cession to the United States was not completed till 1858. In the summer of 1856, all of them, except the three first-named, were abandoned, because of an uprising of the Indians. In 1859 and 1860, the settlements along the Missouri received considerable accessions; the seat of territorial government was located at Yankton, and Hon. William Jayne appointed governor, with John Hutchinson of Minnesota for secretary, and Philemon Bliss of Ohio for chief justice.

The boundaries of the Territory at that time included Montana, Wyoming and Idaho. The entire civilized population of the whole area was only 4,873. Yet, by the 16th of April, 1862, the Territory sent two companies of cavalry to participate in the war of the Rebellion.

In August, 1862, the Indian outbreak in Minnesota occurred, and not only discouraged immigration and put a stop to development in Dakota, but caused numbers to abandon their claims and leave the country. Hence but little advance was made during the next three years. In that interval the Sioux were badly defeated, the great body of them driven beyond the Missouri, and the southern rebellion being likewise quelled, happier days dawned for the new Territory. By 1870 the population had grown to 14,181, but in the meantime the boundaries of the Territory had been changed to where they still remain, and, therefore, the actual increase was the difference between that number and 2,402. The number of farms in 1870 was 1,720, with 42,645 acres of improved land, valued at $2,085,065. The farm animals and wool and dairy products were estimated at $816,461; the soil products at $205,365, and the manufactures produced at $178,570. There were at that time no railroads in the Territory, and no very flattering prospect that any would be built for a number of years to come. Indeed, the progress of development during the first half of the decade ending with 1879 was quite gradual, but by 1875 two causes operated to quicken it. The first was the discovery of gold in the Black Hills, which attracted crowds of adventurers from all parts of the United States. Many of these wisely abandoned the project of attempting the sudden accumulation of wealth by mining in a country which they were forbidden by the governmental authorities to enter, and from which they were threatened with expulsion by both savages and United States troops, and, settling upon claims east of the Missouri, they devoted themselves to cultivating the fertile soil. Others who started for the mines, on being turned back by the troops, retraced their journeys homeward, and also contributed to the settlement of the country by spreading correct information respecting it among their neighbors and friends.

Meantime the attention of railroad companies was being directed hitherward. The route of the Northern Pacific was located, and the road partly built across the northern part of the territory, and several wealthy corporations were prospecting in the older southern counties. The usual result followed. Wherever a road was likely to be built within a few years, settlers flocked in and located in the vicinity of its route. The rate of development was further accelerated, during the period from 1875 till 1880, by the purchase of the Black Hills country from the Indians, in 1877. The census of 1880 gave the territory a white population of 135,177, of whom 34,433 were in the northern, and 97,734 in the southern, half. Of the latter 16,487 were in the Black Hills. The number of farms had, by this time, become 17,435, comprising 1,150,143 acres of improved land, and valued at $22,401,084. The live stock and wool and dairy products were worth $6,827,271; the soil products, $5,648,814; the manufactures, $2,373,970, and the products of gold and silver mines, $3,376,656.

The progress made by this Territory since 1880 is, however, most astonishing, even when compared with the phenomenally progressive countries by which it is surrounded. Comparative statements of the number of inhabitants, farms and manufactories, as given in the census returns for 1880 and 1885, show the following:

	1880.	1885.	Increase.
Inhabitants	135,177	415,664	280,487
Farms	17,435	82,566	65,131
Manufactories	251	1,054	803

A conservative estimate made in June, 1887, gave the population then as 568,447, while the entries of public lands showed an addition of about 40,000 farms, increasing this latter total to 122,000. It was difficult to arrive at the increase of manufactures, but enough was known to give assurance of large additions. The total farm area was less than 4,000,000 acres in 1880, but had grown to 16,842,412 in 1885. Their aggregate value had in the meantime increased from $22,400,000 to about $157,000,000, showing an advance of nearly 700 per cent. in general valuation. Meanwhile the value of farm machinery had increased from $2,400,000 to about $14,000,000. In farm animals the increase was very large, the following being the number reported as assessed for taxation in 1880 to 1887:

	1880.	1886.	1887.
Horses	257,282	334,580	{ 363,765
Mules	9,019	10,553	{
Cows	275,545	386,366	432,287
Oxen and other cattle	383,505	448,695	538,410
Sheep	267,598	278,162	295,594
Hogs	381,415	440,540	496,525

The census figures are taken for 1880, and those of the agricultural department for the years of 1886 and 1887. But the increase is not limited to numbers; the values are even more largely augmented. Within the last three years blooded and high grade stock have been introduced, and proving to be much more profitable, are rapidly becoming general, and the Territory can boast of numerous herds of pure bloods or high grade Short Horns, Herefords, Holsteins, Devons, Galloways, Jerseys, etc. The cow, too, is fast becoming appreciated for her milk-producing ability, and butter and cheese making is growing into importance.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

In no other respect has the development of Dakota been so rapid or exercised such an important influence on the markets of the world as in its agricultural growth. In 1880 her entire soil products did not amount to quite $5,649,000, a sum exceeded largely last year by the least valuable of her staple grain crops—corn. It is hardly worth while to go into details to show the rate of growth, for time and space are limited, and the following statement of her principal crops last year, as given by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, ought to be sufficient to satisfy the least credulous that she has almost unlimited agricultural capacity, viz.:

	Acres.	Bushels.	Value.
Wheat	3,664,737	52,406,000	$27,251,120
Corn	636,120	20,992,000	7,347,200
Oats	1,186,800	37,266,000	9,316,500

Besides these, she produced great quantities of barley, rye, flaxseed, potatoes, buckwheat, and garden vegetables. Far more of the latter than the demand called for. Her only deficiency, so far as relates to farm produce, is in fruit culture; to which little attention has yet been given. It is well understood that plums, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, currants, gooseberries and strawberries can be grown here in greatest luxuriance, but the experiments in orcharding have not been everywhere successful. Yet the difficulties encountered seem to be no greater than have been met with in other Northern States, and there is no reason to apprehend that future efforts will be as unfortunate. Indeed, success may certainly be looked for in the southern portion, at least, as soon as time enough has elapsed for the growth of groves of forest trees.

EDUCATION IN DAKOTA.

Ample provision has been made for educating the rising generation, two sections in every township having been granted by the United States government for the support of common schools, which the territorial and local governments have not been backward in supplementing with other favors. The Territory has now two thousand schoolhouses, a magnificent university at Grand Forks, besides colleges and normal schools. Many of its public school buildings, built of pressed brick, are as fine as you will meet with anywhere. The school attendance is large, for the reason that farming is so much easier in Dakota that the younger members of the family can readily be spared. The school property is value at $25,000,000. Liberal salaries are paid to teachers, and those thoroughly conversant with educational matters are loud in their praises of the general proficiency of the entire system. The following are the educational statistics for the years given:

	1886.	1887.
School townships organized	865	948
Districts organized	1,150	4,156
Pupils enrolled	82,866	87,131
Teachers employed	5,055	4,924
Average pay of teachers per month, male	$45 42	$34 81
Average pay of teachers per month, female	$30 92	$30 36
Number of ungraded schools	40	65
New schoolhouses built	629	389

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS.

The history of religion in Dakota and statistics of its present condition are in many respects incomplete, and one would almost be led to believe that the subject commanded but little attention. Such, however, is not the truth. On the contrary, there are a number of handsome church edifices, few of the cities and larger villages being without from one to a dozen or more, and the number in the rural districts is larger than the sparsity of population would seem to justify. It is difficult to arrive at the total number of church buildings or their value, but there are between 700 and 800 ministers in charge, and the congregations hardly fall short of 1,000; two-thirds of which have no doubt provided themselves with houses of worship. There are believed to be about 1,100 Sabbath-schools, all well attended. Nearly every denomination known in the United States is represented, and it may truthfully be said that the inhabitants, generally speaking, are as much devoted to religion and morality as those of any of the older States. Crimes are of seldom occurrence and the administration of the laws is as prompt and vigorous as in long established communities.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

From the foregoing it will be seen that Dakota has advantages over the older parts of the country far surpassing any disadvantages incident to her newness of settlement. As an agricultural district, she is equal to any part of the world, and farming pays here quite as well as anywhere else. That it is a mistake to suppose that this industry needs be confined to wheat growing, is sufficiently shown; and, while the wheat produced grades very high, equally good qualities of all other varieties of grains grown in the northern half of the temperate zone are produced here in as great abundance and quite as cheaply. We may sum up by asserting that, whether people choose to acknowledge it or not, Dakota is already on the high road to prosperity and too far advanced for any probable circumstances to hinder or even to retard her progress. And the time is near at hand when she will command as much influence on the politics and commerce of the country as any State of the Union.
